Dear Friends

In response to Molly Ivins' Column in the Detroit Free Press, I urge you press for the best children's programming on TV.

Some viewers will reenact the violence
they see, some will be able to think, reason, read and write when they reenact the positive characterizations
you can put on TV.

Sincerely,

Jane Hazen

I would like to know why we have to pay for programs we don't even watch, it might be different if we had children in school but we are too old for that. For 2 years I have had to miss the Xmas programs on Tenn. Nashville; now they are going to have the Dukes of Hazard on at 7:00 but I won't be ~~able~~ able to see them. It seems there are a lot of other cable stations you could find the school program on 5-10. 5 hrs is a lot to lose on regular programs you like to watch.

I'm not the only different people I talk to say the same thing, one niece stopped in & said she wondered why she couldn't get the Tenn. channel.

I would appreciate a reply (why).

I thought when C51 was sold I thought maybe you would change channel 12!

Sincerely,
your ~~neighbor~~

Mrs James K Stover.

Dear Secretary:

This letter is to let you know of my displeasure at the quality of television provided by the commercial networks for children. I feel that programs such as the Power Rangers and the like, portray a violent and simplistic attitude toward solving problems. They present a view of the world which is dishonest and escapist. The context of these programs from the standpoint of the sponsors clearly is to sell products, not provide quality programming material contributing to the betterment of children's characters. There is too much violence in children's programming.

I find it shocking that many parents do not seem to care what their children watch so long as it avoids plain references to sexual matters. Perhaps our government is listening too much to parts of our population who have a personal agenda which in their case is stronger than the great need for education of our children based on truth and the principles of peace and brotherhood.

Dear Sir;

This letter is to urge you to hold fast and resist with all the power of your office, the attempt by the TV industry to demoralize our children in the name of higher profits for themselves.

We desperately need, at this time in our nation's history, more high quality educational type programs for our children and certainly less violence and sex readily available to them on daytime and early evening TV programs.

I am a Grandmother to 10 and Great-grandmother to 5 and I do not usually write letters. However, I feel so strongly for today's children that I wanted to make my views known.

With the billions of dollars spent frivolously by consumers in this country, surely we can spend some to help our children become the intelligent, socially conscious citizens they have a right to be.

Sincerely,

Judith A. Paul
